HOW DOES A PREGNANT WOMAN WHO IS ON HUSKY GET MEDICAL COVERAGE FOR HER NEWBORN?

If a woman is on HUSKY during her pregnancy, her newborn should automatically be enrolled in HUSKY A through a process called Newborn Eligibility.

When a mother with HUSKY coverage delivers, the hospital completes a Newborn Notification Form. This form is faxed to the DSS Regional Processing Unit (RPU), where:

- The newborn is granted HUSKY coverage for one year.
- The baby is given a client identification number
- The hospital is notified of the baby's identification number
- DSS is notified that the newborn has been added, so that DSS can issue a client identification card for the newborn

PREGNANT WOMEN ELIGIBILITY

HUSKY A income limit for pregnant and postpartum women, not on HUSKY is 263% Federal Poverty Level. A pregnant woman counts herself plus the number of babies she is expecting in determining her eligibility. For example, if she is carrying a child, the pregnant woman would count as two people in addition to any other members in her household. Women at or below 263% Federal Poverty Level are eligible for HUSKY A coverage during pregnancy and up to 12 months postpartum. Women who qualify for HUSKY because of pregnancy remain eligible through their postpartum period, regardless of changes in income. The mother may remain eligible for HUSKY A after the postpartum period only if her family income is at or below 138% Federal Poverty Level.

HUSKY B Prenatal Care program provides health care to pregnant non-citizens. Federal Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) allows unborn children in the CHIP program, and services include the full range of HUSKY B benefits including pregnancy-related care, preventive care, dental and behavioral care, and other types of health care. Pregnancy-related care includes prenatal doctor visits, prenatal vitamins, ultrasounds, other tests, and more.
